

Letter from Jon Young, Senior Author of Coyote's Guide to Connecting with Nature, foreword by Richard Louv, and other books. The letter was sent to Akamai University in support of Randall Eaton teaching online courses in environmental studies and transpersonal psychology.

Greetings Suzy

This is Jon Young. I am writing a quick note of support on behalf of Randall Eaton who I understand has applied for a position with your organization. I have known Randall since the late 1990's and have participated with him on a number of projects. He has worked for OWLink Media (our small media publishing company providing nature connection training resources) in a variety of ways from marketing, to creating a book of his own, and teaching courses.

Randall has a lot to offer and is a powerhouse of inspiration and wisdom to help people connect to nature and themselves. He's helped many who have attended his workshops with our organization and other events I have been a part of with Randall. He is very centered in his heart, has great vision and is very supportive of others on their learning journey. He is a tireless researcher, writer, and speaker. He will be a great help to your organization.

If you would like to speak to me in person, it might be made possible by emailing Deborah Lindsay, HYPERLINK "mailto:deborah@8shields.org" \t "_blank" deborah@8shields.org and setting up a phone appointment.

Wishing you the best,

Jon Young
